FOREWORD

The Borough of Northampton is located on the east bank of the Lehigh River and on both sides of the Hokendauqua Creek, on the site of the noted Indian village of Hokendauqua. It was formed in 1902, by uniting the two villages of Siegfried and Stemton, which were parts of Allen Township, and whose growth had been stimulated by the rapid development of the cement industry. The population is about ten thousand, many of whom are either of foreign birth or foreign extraction.

The territory included in the Borough of Northampton formed a part of the famous Irish settlement of the Colonial period, which included all of Allen and East Allen Townships and adjoining territory. The settlement was made by Scotch Irish (Presbyterians) from the northern part of Ireland. Justice William Allen purchased thirteen hundred and forty-five acres, lying on both sides of the Hokendauqua Creek, from the Penn heirs, whose creditor he was, hence the name Allen Township. The first building erected within the borough limits of which we have any record, was a grist mill on the Hokendauqua Creek by Hugh Wilson, soon after his purchase of four hundred acres from William Allen in 1739. This mill property was owned and operated for many years by the late Captain Theodore Howell, and is now owned by the Atlas Portland Cement Company.

The upper end of the Borough and the adjoining territory was the scene of a brutal massacre during the Indian uprising of 1763. To protect the settlers and the mill, a Block House, which is still standing, was erected by order of Benjamin Franklin.

Peace loving Mennonites settled among the Palatine and Swiss settlers of Allen and Whitehall townships. They erected a meeting house on the north side of West Twenty-first Street opposite the Mennonite cemetery prior to 1761. In 1770, Colonel

John Siegfried removed from Maxatawny Township, Berks county, to Allen Township and conducted a tavern and operated a ferry crossing the Lehigh River. The ferry has been supplanted by the present wooden-span covered bridge, frequently referred to as Siegfried's Ferry Bridge. During the Revolutionary War the tavern was the scene of spirited gatherings, and the proprietor, Colonel John Siegfried, led the militia in several campaigns, participating in the engagements of Trenton, Assunpink, Princeton, Red Bank, Brandywine, White Marsh, Germantown and Monmouth; and also as Frontier Rangers. A monument was erected in 1914 on the Mennonite Cemetery, the tablet of which commemorates the services of the people of the community in the struggle for Independence.

When the recent war broke out, in which our priceless heritage was threatened, the people of Northampton, "like in the days of old," rose up in their might and responded to every call for men, for money and for material.

A brief record of the responses, the sacrifices and the war activities of the Borough of Northampton is found in the following pages.

General Pershing's Address

Because it embodies the army's expression of appreciation of the numerous war activities in the homeland as well as in the camps and battlefields of France, the address of General John J. Pershing, who headed the A. E. F., before the Congress of the United States, in the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., September 18, 1919, is made a part of the Souvenir Book of the Welcome Home celebration in Northampton, Wednesday and Thursday, October 15 and 16, 1919.

"Mr. President, Mr. Speaker, and gentlemen of the Congress, I am deeply sensible of the privilege of appearing before you as a representative of the American Expeditionary Forces, and am filled with emotion at the sentiments that have just been expressed. This honor affords me profound gratitude as a recognition of the achievements of our splendid Army. In receiving at your hands an expression of the approval of our people I am richly rewarded.

A final report of the organization and the operations of our Armies will be made to the Secretary of War. The manner in which this great force was developed into an instrumentality for victory is well known to you. The burdens that fell to the lot of our soldiers have been heavy, and the way beset by many obstacles, but faith in the righteousness of our cause and trust in Almighty God have given us courage and inspiration.

The trials of battle demanded Spartan endurance and utmost self-sacrifice. Never have men faced a more difficult task nor borne greater hardship, and never have troops shown a finer spirit of willingness or more resolute purpose.

The might of America lay not only in her numbers and her wealth but also in the spirit of the people and their determination to succeed at whatever cost. While every man who went to France courageously did his part, behind him were millions of others eager to follow, all supported by a loyal people who deprived themselves to sustain our armies and to succor our Allies.

Whether billeted in French, Belgian, or Italian villages, or in the camps of England, our young men have left behind them a standard of frankness, of integrity, of gentleness, and of helpfulness, which will give the other nations of the world a firmer belief in the sincerity of our motives.

The benefits flowing from the experience of our soldiers will be broadly felt. They have returned in the full vigor of their manhood, strong and clean. In the community of effort, men from all walks of life have learned to know and to appreciate each other. Through their patriotism, discipline, and association they have become virile, confident, and broadminded. Rich in the consciousness of honorable public service, they will bring into the life of our country a deeper love for our institutions and more intelligent devotion to the duties of citizenship.

To you, gentlemen of the Congress, we owe the existence and the maintenance of our armies in the field. With a clear conception of the magnitude of the struggle, you adopted the draft as the surest means of utilizing our man power. You promptly enacted wise laws to develop and apply our resources to the best effect. You appropriated the fabulous sums required for military purposes. Many of your Members visited our armies in the field and cheered us by their interest and sympathy. You made possible the organization and the operations by which victory was achieved.

Throughout the war the President reposed in me his full confidence, and his unflinching support simplified my task. The Secretary of War made repeated visits to the front, and I am deeply grateful for his wise counsel. Under him the various staffs, bureaus, and departments, with all their personnel, are deserving of especial acknowledgment for the ability with which their problems were met. The officers and soldiers who served at home are entitled to their full share in the victory. There existed a unity of purpose between our Government in all of its branches and the command of the troops in the field that materially hastened the call.

Our Navy performed a brilliant part in transporting troops and supplies and in maintaining our sea communications. The Army was convoyed across the seas with the maximum of safety and comfort and with incredibly small loss. In this arduous service, the generous assistance of the seamen of Great Britain deserves our lasting appreciation.

A special tribute is due to those benevolent men and women who ministered to the needs of our soldiers at home and abroad. The welfare societies, maintained by a generous public, gave us invaluable aid. In our hospitals the surgeons and nurses, both permanent and temporary, served with a skill and fidelity that will ever be worthy of our grateful remembrance.

Business and professional men abandoned their private interests and gave their service to the country. Devoted men, women, and even children, often in obscure positions, zealously labored to increase the output of ships, munitions, war material, and food supplies, while the press and the pulpit stimulated patriotic enthusiasm.

Our admiration goes out to our war-worn allies, whose tenacity after three years of conflict made possible the effectiveness of our effort. Through their loyal support and hearty cooperation a genuine spirit of comradeship sprang up among us which should firmly unite the peoples as it did their armies.

The cheerfulness and fortitude of our wounded were an inspiration and a stimulus to their comrades. Those who are disabled should become the affectionate charge of our people, whose care they have so richly earned. Let us in sympathy remember the widows and the mothers who today mourn the loss of their husbands and sons.

Our hearts are filled with reverence and love for our triumphant dead. Buried in hallowed ground which their courage redeemed, their graves are sacred shrines that the Nation will not fail to honor.

The glorious record made in the fight for our treasured ideals will be a precious heritage to posterity. It has welded together our people and given them a deeper sense of nationality. The solidity of the Republic and its institutions in the test of a world war should fill with pride every man and woman living under its flag. The great achievements, the high ideals, the sacrifices of our Army and our people belong to no party and to no creed. They are the Republic's legacy to be sacredly treasured and carefully transmitted to future generations."

Memorial Day Address

Chaplain John Sheridan Zelig

Glowing tribute to the soldiery of Pennsylvania was given by Chaplain Zelig in his Memorial Day address in the High School Auditorium, May 30th, 1919. His address follows:

"Some eight or nine years ago I was standing one morning on the platform of Waterloo Station in London, when a photographer came and set up his camera in the middle of the platform, pointing it toward some doors at the other end of the station. A little afterward those doors opened and through them came eight of the finest soldiers of the British Army bearing on their shoulders a little yellow coffin covered with a white shawl and with a bunch of red flowers resting upon it.

"I asked who it was who was being carried by the soldiers and was told to my amazement that it was "The Lady of the Lamp" or Florence Nightingale, the famous nurse of the Crimean War, who had done so much to alleviate the horrors of the wounded on the battlefield. How far away seemed all that carnage. It seemed as if never again would there be such scenes on this earth as she saw. And behold once again the earth has been covered with the wounded and hollowed with graves and there has been need of greater services than Florence Nightingale ever dreamed of. We are here today to offer our memorial of thousands who have fallen.

My first meeting with the Pennsylvania men whom I loved so much was like this. I had been sent to join a travelling kitchen outfit to help feed the men on the highways as the new troops were pressing in to Chateau-Thierry and beyond. And one day while working on some ovens in the backyard of a Chateau-Thierry house an irate and profane officer came to the front window and began to swear at the Red Cross men there because they were not present at the new Field Hospital just started in the other end of the city. So I was sent down to investigate. I found this Pennsylvania Hospital with every man hard at work as the wounded were being brought in and as there was so much to do I had to detach myself from the kitchen expedition and stay to help as I could these men who were working with all their might to receive and help the wounded. I had not been with them two days before I found out that they were as choice men as I had ever lived with in my life. And from that day on I lived with the Field Hospitals of the 28th Division until after the Armistice.

"It is a great pleasure to spend my first Memorial Day after my return from France in the midst of Pennsylvanians, for my year overseas was spent mostly with the men of the two Pennsylvania Divisions, the 28th and the 79th.

"I believe the best memorial I can offer to the men who fell in France is to set before you my memories of these splendid men as I saw them and lived with them day after day. It was at Chateau-Thierry that I first fell in with the Pennsylvanians and the day after I joined them as they pressed in through the breach made in the lines of the Huns, then began those duties of laying to rest one after another the bodies of those who had fallen. The other day as I came down the Ferry on the Hudson a soldier sitting on his barracks bag said "Don't you remember me, chaplain?" And I said "Well, I know you are a bugler." "But don't you remember," he added, "how I blew Taps for you down in that cemetery on the Marne at Chateau-Thierry—seventeen one night, chaplain, and then seventeen the next night." Yes, I remembered, for two days of life with the Pennsylvania men had made me devoted to them. They were a royal, home-loving, courteous, and friendly set of men. I had thought that my first affections belonged to my college, but now it seems to me as if the mention of one of those Ambulance or Hospital men or the meeting with them sent a thrill through me such as my college never gave.

"And I have made up my mind wherever I go to name with honor one true-hearted fellow to whose lot it fell at Chateau-Thierry to take care of the burials of these men and prepare their graves. The regulations called for a trench, but "Bob" Swearman, of Meyersdale, of this State, would never make a trench. He said the very least we could do for an American soldier who had fallen was to lay him in his separate grave and so, though it doubled his labor and that of his men, it was always a separate grave.

"It is right on Memorial Day that we should speak much of those graves so far away on which we can lay no flowers with our own hands. Standing one day up on the vineyard slope opposite Mont Sec we had just finished the burial of an officer and as the Sergeant and I stood there alone he said "You know, chaplain, there's one thing in the life of the Army that just takes hold of me more than anything else." And I said, "What's that, Sergeant?" And he replied, "It's TAPS, that sound just takes right hold of me always."

"And under that head of Taps of course there gather many of the most sacred memories of our men in France. How nobly some of them met their end. Said one of them, brought in desperately wounded, "I want to know just exactly what my chances are," and when they told him the truth that he had no chance, he said "Then I want to see a chaplain." Then he drew out from his coat a little leather case and opening it displayed on one side a picture of the flag, on the other the family group to which he belonged. "There," he said, "are the two things that have held me up and brought me through." Then there came the home-messages, and then it was all over.

"How I prize the memories of worship with those men in all sorts of situations and places. I can never forget the brook-side communion when nearly fifty Pennsylvania boys stood in line on the bank of the stream at Cohan and took the communion—or the evenings in the ancient Catholic chapel at Chateau-Thierry, which the priest and the mother superior had allowed me to use, or the barns where at night it was so dark I could not see my audience, but simply knew they were there—way back somewhere in the life of those Pennsylvania boys I felt it strongly that the church and the home had done their work before ever these men went abroad.

"We used to get very tired, but somehow working for those splendid men put back into you as much as it ever took out of you.

I recall the services at Chateau-Thierry in the chapel of the Catholic Convent which the mother superior had permitted me to use and when the Vicar of the city came back and I had to ask him to continue the privilege I told him I knew it was unusual and he replied "Yes, but this is war and you Americans have come a long distance to help us and we must make every concession we can. You are welcome to use our church." And so our hymns floated out over the discord and trouble of those days.

"Thence we moved toward Fismes, where our Hospital was camped in the open field and had to suspend work because the Hun bombers dropped some shells in upon us one night, but luckily they failed to explode.

"No one would be speaking fitly of them who did not speak of their light-heartedness, their fun, their gaiety and their boyishness. Life is richer for their jokes and their mischief, it is richer for their heroism, their courage and toil and sacrifice. Never have I known such intense fellowship as those men allowed you to have. When you opened your heart to them they opened their's to you.

"How rich were our men in fun and jokes and pranks. Rich in poetry and imagination too some times. One day passing through a wretched piece of pasture one of our men who was crouched down under a "pup-tent" said "Say, chaplain, I want to show you something," and handed me out a poem which he had written. It was really beautiful and described the joy he felt in anticipation of getting home and seeing his wife and children again. "Why this is fine," I said, "but I didn't know you were married, Murphy," and he grinned and said "Oh, shucks, I ain't. I just thought I'd like to see how it would feel to be married." When all the imagination and poetry of these men awakes we shall spend the rest of our days rejoicing in the richness of it.

"I never saw anything more magnificent than the opening of the attack in the Argonne Forest when one night at 11.30 at the left there began the great barrage which gradually swept over the horizon until it was all aflame and the thunder of it never ceased until into the morning. There was a glory about that attack. It seemed to voice the mighty indignation of our Allied nations against that one nation which had treacherously broken the peace of this whole world and because of its own dishonest and selfish ambitions thrown every country into turmoil and pain and sorrow. I thought of the Battle Hymn of the Republic:

"Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord,

He is trampling out the vintage where his grapes of wrath are stored."

"And now we are honoring those who are fallen—year by year we shall grow in the sense of what they did for the whole world. The manhood of America rose to great heights in those days on the Marne and the Vesle and in the Argonne and above Toul—we can never forget—and again I say that it is one of the honors which has fallen to me to end a year spent with the finest men I have ever lived with by speaking in their praise to those who knew and loved them so well at home."

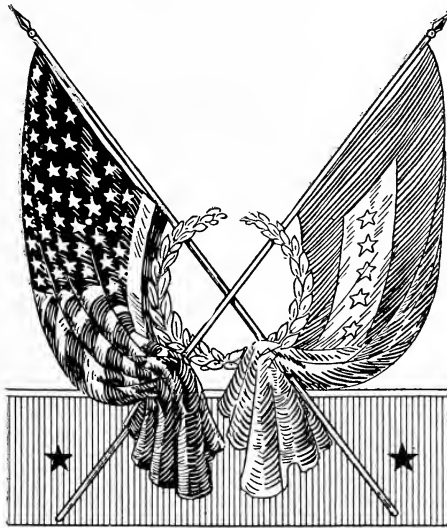

"So, I was as you might say "kicked into the Pennsylvania Division by an irate colonel, but I was "kicked up-stairs" and not down into the very richest fellowship of my life.

In Memoriam

WILLIAM H. YOCH

William H. Yoch, son of Francis C. and Sarah L. (Heffelfinger) Yoch, was born at Petersville, Allen Township, Northampton county, March 26, 1892; died at Camp Meade and was buried at Zion's church, Kreidersville.

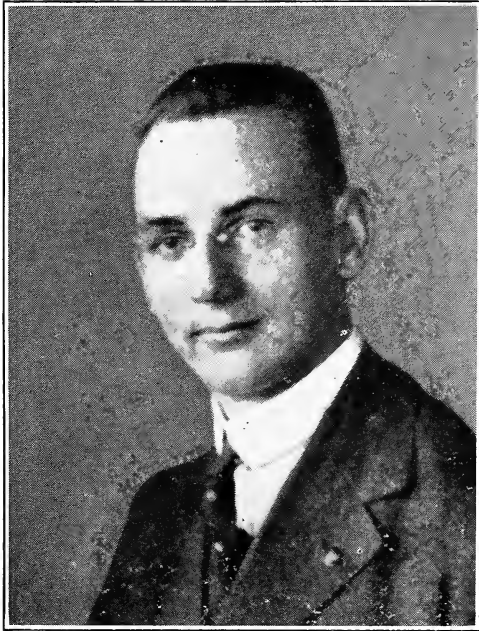

Mr. Francis C. Yoch,
Northampton, R. D. 2, Pa.

My dear Mr. Yoch:

The whole college community has been saddened by the intelligence which first reached us Sunday evening, of the death of William H. Yoch. Notwithstanding his withdrawal from college to enter the service of our country, we counted him one of our own and feel as deeply our sense of loss as if his death had occurred here in our midst.

In the pursuit of his college course which he undertook with a view to preparing himself for the noblest of all callings—that of the Christian ministry, he revealed qualities of intellectual and moral strength which won for him not only the respect but the true affection of the officers, professors and students, all of whom, without exception, are numbered today among his sorrowing friends.

I was always impressed with the absolute sincerity of this young man and with his deep sense of loyalty. No more sincere friend did I have among the students of the College, and his friendship for me was equalled by his love for the College. He was the organizer and president of the Press Club through which he rendered a much appreciated service to the institution by systematically disseminating through the newspapers items of interest concerning the work of the College.

On the participation of the United States in the war, he immediately headed a movement which resulted in the erection on the campus of a stately flagstaff, the dedication of which took place on the very day the first Ursinus students took leave for the training camp. In these events he displayed the same devotion to his country that he had always shown toward his college, and when eventually the call came to enter definitely the service of the latter he responded like a true patriot.

His rugged strength of character, his warm heart and his unassuming manner won for him a well-merited popularity which will insure a permanent place for him in the hearts of his college associates and in the life of Ursinus College itself.

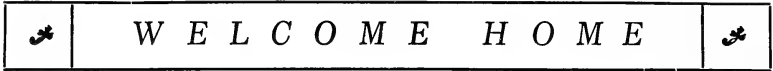

Please be assured that in your own grief and that of other loved ones, we tender heartfelt sympathy and pray you may have abundantly the blessing of God unto whose glory William H. Yoch lived and died.

Very sincerely,

GEO. LESLIE OMWAKE.

NICHOLAS TARUS

Nicholas Tarus, son of Michael Tarus, of Cementon, was born in Galicia, Austria, May 15, 1898. He came with his parents to America in the month of March, 1911. At the time of his enlistment his family lived in Northampton, and was employed as a motor truck driver by the Whitehall Portland Cement Company. Upon enlisting he was sent to Camp Grant, Rockford, Illinois, and was a member of Company E, 35th Engineers. He was killed in a railway accident in France on a train on which he was serving as brakeman. His name appeared on the casualty list of July 22, 1918. He was a Slovak and a member of the Catholic Church of Greek rite, Northampton, Pa.

Mrs. Emma Moser,

Allentown, Pa., U. S. A.

Dear Mrs. Moser:

We laid to rest your husband, Oliver J. Moser, Private, 72nd Co. Camp Lee Replacement Draft, in the American Cemetery, Noyes, France, October 7, 1918. Grave number 148. He was buried with full military honors.

Your husband died at Camp Hospital 26, Noyes, France, on October 6, 1918, 5.10 A. M., of Pneumonia. He was well cared for by both nurses and doctors. We always feel sad when a boy leaves. This great cause has so cemented our sympathies, that a loss to one is a loss to all. We all are as one great heart, one heart in our sorrow and in our joy.

We feel, for every noble life sacrificed in this great cause of righteousness, a record will be made in Heaven. And somehow it comes to us from somewhere the thought that if the sacrifice on the cross will be sanctified on earth it can only be as we suffer and sacrifice. The Kingdom will come not clothed in joy, but baptised in tears.

May God our Father in Heaven bless and keep all his dear loved ones while your heart pains. And may He give us all strength to sacrifice and suffer willingly to a worthy and glorious end.

"In all things we acknowledge His will and way."

With deepest sympathy,

WILLIAM PIFFY,

SERGEANT JOHN F. GILLESPIE

Sergeant John F. Gillespie, son of C. J. O'Donnell, was born at Tamaqua, Pa. He was left an orphan in infancy, and had his home with his uncle, John J. Gillespie, in Northampton, in gratitude for whose kindness he assumed the name of Gillespie. He was drafted October 6, 1917. He was a devout Catholic and his body was buried at Freedom, Pa. His sister, Catherine O'Donnell, served as a Red Cross nurse in France.

Camp Meade, Md., Oct. 13, 1918.

Miss Rose Gillespie,
Northampton, Pa.

My dear Miss Rose:

Because of Army Regulations only, I was unable to attend the funeral. I was keenly disappointed when I discovered that I would not be allowed to accompany Sergts. Linden and La Beau, but my disappointment was shared by at least a half dozen more of John's friends who were very anxious to attend.

At a time such as this it is most difficult to express one's feelings and very little comfort can be carried by words.

In thinking of John — the expression of one of my former professors is strongly recalled, by his saying—"To test the value of your life ask yourself this question—"Is the world better from my having lived in it?" Thinking of John I say, "yes," decidedly yes, the world was better from his having lived in it — for wherever he was he carried cheer and brightness with him. I have known and worked with him since his entering the army and I have never known a finer, cleaner, more upright man. In the time that I knew him I never heard him say a word against any of his fellow men and know nothing about him except that which is highly commendable.

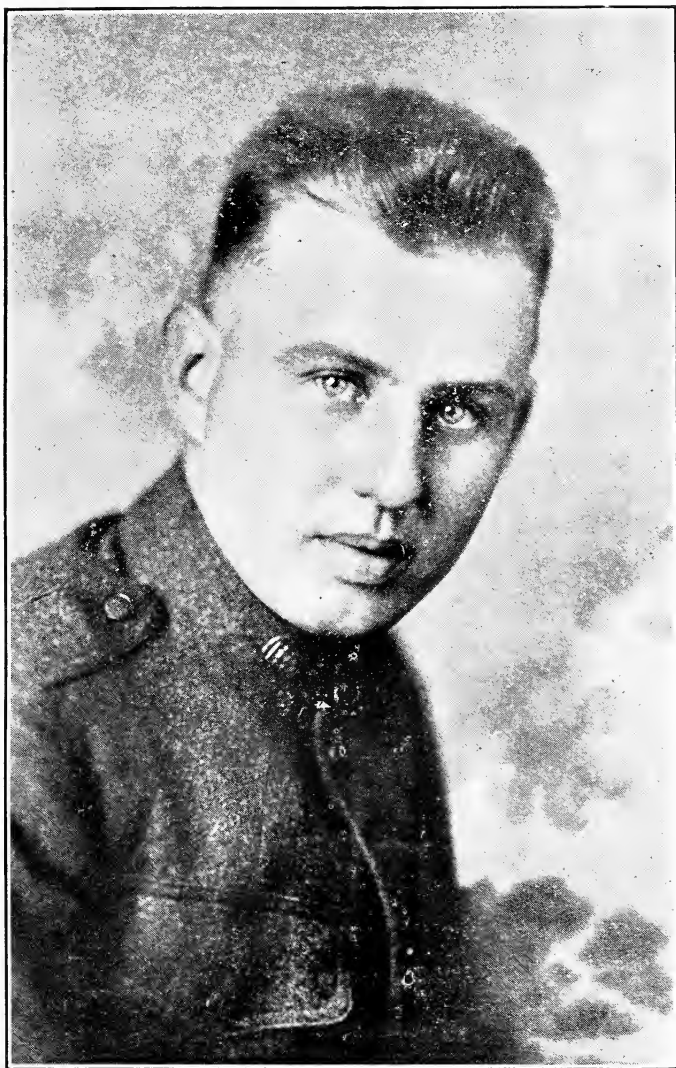

His recent transfer to the Filter Plant from the Pumping Station meant that Lieut. Potteiger and myself had planned big things for him in the future. It was our intention that after he had mastered the work of the Filter Plant that he should take charge of the entire system.

John spoke of you quite frequently and always told us that you practically meant Mother to him.

At a time like this it is difficult for us to understand the workings of the Almighty, but then it is not for us to judge.

Sincerely,

HERMAN J. STROHECKER,
Quar. Sergt. Senior Make,
In charge of Filtration.

Mr. Andrew Schall,
Northampton, Pa.

Dear Sir:

A gloom settled over our little camp when we learned from a soldier returning from the hospital that Sergeant Franklin A. Schall had died from injuries received in action. He was hit on the shoulder by a large piece of H. E. (high explosive shell) on the morning of November 7th, on Hill "378." At the time he was being evacuated the doctors had hopes of his recovery. I had just returned from a school which began soon after the armistice and continued for six weeks, when news of his death came to me.

I am proud to have known your son. A more faithful, and a more loyal soldier never fought for Country or Principle, than he. I had perfect confidence in him. It was the least of my worries to be followed into action by such men as he. Without looking back I knew every man was coming and he was always at my heels. We have been together in some pretty tight places and that fact that I had a cool, collected man like Sergeant Schall at my side when things looked bad, gave me a lot of confidence. I was within 50 yards of him when he was hit and through all our actions against the enemy we have enjoyed a wonderful comradeship. Yours is a heavy loss, but man never died fighting for a greater cause and, finally, God decides.

One of the first things I'll do when I get back is to visit you and to tell you of your son's military career.

Sincerely yours,

JOHN WALTERS.

Dear Mrs. Kiechel:

I have received official notification from Base Hospital No. 208, A. E. F., of the death of your son, Corporal Ross Kiechel, of this Company. He is reported as having died at 6.56 P. M., March 29th, 1919, from meningitis.

Corporal Kiechel was one of the most valuable and best liked men in the Company. He was under consideration for promotion to sergeant on account of his excellent work in the office. In addition to the loss of a very efficient assistant, his death deprives each of us in the Company Headquarters of a valued friend.

Yours with sincerest sympathy,

DONALD M. COOK,
1st Lieut. A. S. C., U. S. A.
Commanding.

BASE HOSPITAL No. 208
TALENCE APO 705

April 11th, 1919.

Mrs. Mary E. Kiechel,
1630 Washington Ave.,
Northampton, Pa.

My dear Mr. Kiechel:

It is with much regret that I write you the sad news of your son, Corporal Ross G. Kiechel, 1791654, Co. I, Cement Mills, death. You have probably heard of it from the Government, but will want to hear from some one in the hospital who can tell you more of the details.

Your son was in this hospital a very short time, barely two days. He was brought in on the evening of March 27th, with bronchial pneumonia. He was conscious then but the next morning he was unconscious and his fever was very high, meningitis developed and it was from that dread disease that he died on the twenty-ninth of March at 6.56 P. M. He had every care from the doctors and the nurse, the doctors came in repeatedly to see him and did what they could but he was too ill to save. He was given a military funeral the following day and buried in the American Cemetery No. 25, Talence, Near Bordeaux, (Gironde) France. His grave is No. 506, in Section B. He is buried with about five hundred other patriotic American boys and you may be assured that his grave will be well cared for by the U. S. Government.

With the deepest sympathy for you in your sorrow and trusting that you may find help to hear it from the only one who can help us at such a time, I am

Very sincerely yours,
BEALL MARTIN,
Home Communication Service.

Base Hospital 208, A. P. O. 705, A. E. F.

Dear Mrs. Kiechel:

I received your letter this morning, and also the one from Mrs. Sieger, and I will gladly tell you as much as I know of your son and brother's illness.

He was just in the hospital 48 hours when he died. The only pain he complained of was in his nose and head. He came to this hospital on Thursday evening, and I saw him when I went on duty Friday morning. I went into his room and asked him if there was anything I could do for him, and he said, "nurse, I have a terrible pain in my nose and head; is there something you can do for me?" I told him, I would do everything I possibly could for him to relieve him and make him comfortable. That was the very last that he knew, he lost consciousness and did not even seem to suffer any more pain. He had a very easy death, did not struggle any; he died, just like as if he was a child going to sleep, after a day's play. That is the best way I can explain it to you. He never said anything of his folks at home, but, when I would see his little things that he had I knew there were dear ones somewhere. The hospital where he died is located in a little village called Lycee-De-Talence, it is near one of the largest cities in France, Bordeaux. He has been buried in a little American cemetery just about one-half hour's walk from the hospital. The American cemetery joins a large French cemetery.

I have been out to visit his grave and it has been marked with the large white wooden cross that bears his name, rank, company and regiment. If there is any more that you can think of I will gladly tell you, if you just ask me. His diagnosis was Spinal Meningitis with Erysipelas, and you know that is very severe. I am expecting to leave here any day for my home and if at any time you wish to write me and ask me any question, I will gladly answer.

The little things, I just thought I would take a chance and send them to you, as I knew you would be glad to have them, and I am so glad to know that you have received them.

I have been married since I last wrote you, so I will give you my home address, and you will know where to find me, if you want to write me. I will not think it any trouble to answer, as I am only glad to try to make you feel a little relieved.

Sincerely,

LIEUTENANT ELWOOD FLOYD KRESGE

Lieut. Elwood Floyd Kresge, son of Wilson A. and Clara (Roller) Kresge, was born in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, November 2, 1891. His mother, becoming an invalid when he was not yet seven years of age, he came to live with his aunt, Mrs. E. J. Royer, coming to Northampton in 1901. He enlisted in the air service, July 19, 1917, and was commissioned a pilot, April 25, 1918. He sailed for France, August following and fell at Coblenz, April 25, 1919. He was a member of Grace Reformed congregation.

James T. Hutchison,
5th Pursuit Group,
138th Aero Squadron,
Coblenz, Germany.
To Captain Miles Kresge,
Brest, France.

April 28th, 1919.

Dear "Kres":

Yours to hand this morning and indeed very glad to hear from you. Your letter came at an opportune period, in a way, for I did not possess your home address and I have a sad bit of news which I must impart to you, tho doubtlessly you will have learned all the facts by the time this reaches you. I inclose a clipping herewith taken from the "Amaroc," a local paper printed in Coblenz for the members of the Third Army. This clipping is self explanatory, but for your information I will tell you the details.

The Third Army staged a so-called carnival on an island in the Rhine, in which the Air Service played an important part by furnishing aerial feats for the spectators. My own group, together with various observation outfits were elected to stage the show. From the 278th, Kresge and Moore were sent up here to the show, they being the pick of the Squadron for the mission. Their program consisted of a photographic contest, message dropping, etc., competing with Salmsons, Bregnets and other two place machines for speed, accuracy and general efficiency. I met

Kresge and Moore upon their arrival in Coblenz and was with them the greater part of the time up to the time of the fatality. Both were very much enthused over their prospects, Kresge did some exceedingly good flying, always playing the game safe and using his head. No fancy flying or fool chances at all, perfectly sober and cautious, just one of those unforeseen accidents in which Fate seems to play so strongly.

On the day of the crash, Kresge landed on our field, and the mechanics put chucks under his wheels and tested out his motor, which he thought to be missing. After the test and some minor repairs, he took off, his motor running perfectly, climbed to about 300 feet and turned to circle the field. The nose of the machine was seen to suddenly drop and the machine dropped into a vrille, crashing into the ground with terrific force. Both Kresge and Moore were instantly killed, being badly mangled. The machine did not catch fire.

At the time of the accident I was standing beside my own machine while my mechanic was warming the motor, preparatory to my flight. I saw Kres take off, watched the entire thing, and had the misfortune to see him crash a short distance from where I stood. At the time the Liberty nosed down the motor was running perfectly, and continued to do so until Kres cut it, realizing his fate. He tried to pull out of the spin with his motor, but failing in this he cut his motor, must have released the pressure, and shut off the gas, all this in a fraction of a minute. As soon as I saw him in the spin I observed his controls to see if he was going to come out. I saw the elevators fan in a vain endeavor to straighten out, but his rudder which was all on the right, never moved from the start to the finish. I know and you know that the boy knew too much about flying not to control properly for the spin, and he was not panicky or excitable. There is no doubt in my mind but what something, either the observer's foot, his camera or a gun magazine fell into the cockpit, jamming the rudder; for considering the sudden dip of the nose and the way

|---|-----------------------|---|

in which he used his motor and elevators to escape, together with the fact that the rudder never moved, shows me conclusively that his control was jammed. Shortly after the crash I examined the controls, but things were so broken up and scattered that nothing could be ascertained. Our doctor, ambulance, etc., arrived shortly, they were quickly released, but both had been instantly killed.

I personally saw that Captain Heisen was notified, assumed charge of the personal effects, procured metal caskets, and arranged for the funeral. Capt. Heisen arrived the next day and we buried them today, just behind the airdome — a solemn informal affair, but one which hurt me greatly. I shall have crosses made and erected showing their names and organizations and in the event you or any of his relatives come this way to witness their last resting place, or to move their bodies, rest assured that every endeavor will be taken to locate them. We have done everything possible for the boy because of our great love for him and for you which we so keenly feel.

I extend to you and yours my heartfelt sympathy, Kres, and may God bless and watch over the soul of the boy whom we so greatly loved and admired.

Kindly write me, boy, telling me of your intentions and if there is anything I can possibly do for you, do not hesitate to command me. As ever,

Your Friend, "HUTCH."

Toul, France, at 9.40 A. M., April 19, 1919, in Plane No. 32234, Motor No. 23923, Squadron No. 3, per telephonic instructions from Group Operations Office to report to Colonel Cheney, Weisenthurm, Germany, to represent this squadron in message dropping contest of 3rd Army Carnival. In the afternoon of April 19th, 1919, Lieut. Kresge phoned he had had a forced landing at Deidenhofen, but with available mechanical assistance would be able to proceed, which he did.

2. About 5.00 P. M., April 25th, 1919, information was received by phone that Lieuts. Kresge and Moore had crashed, both being killed.

3. The following is quoted from report of Board of Officers appointed to investigate the accident:

"About two o'clock, April 25, 1919, Lieuts. Elwood F. Kresge, pilot, and Charles C. Moore, observer, landed at Coblenz Air-dome. The Field Officer met them and they stated to him that they were taking photographs and the motor was missing. The pilot tested his motor for several minutes, and everything was all right, took off into the wind, climbed to about 200 feet, and on the second turn to the right, which was with the wind, the nose dropped, went into a vrille, and crashed. Both pilot and observer were dead when the ambulance and Medical Officer arrived, which was within about two minutes after the accident occurred. Their bodies were taken to U. S. Hospital No. 27, Coblenz."

4. The remains of both officers were prepared and buried in metallic caskets in American Cemetery, Section "A," Plot No. 2, Coblenz, Germany, April 28th, 1919. Identification tag was buried with each, and cross over each grave bears identification tag also.

5. Personal effects of Lieut. Kresge were turned into the Quartermaster at Toul, France, on or about May 7th, 1919, and copy of list was furnished Captain Miles W. Kresge, cousin of Lieut. Kresge. Captain Kresge was formerly a member of this organization and has, since the accident, returned to the United States.

The list of men in the Service from Northampton has been compiled by the Enlistment Bureau Committee of the Red Triangle League, Claude C. Fogelman, chairman. Great pains were taken to have the list complete and correct. Return post-cards, asking for data, were addressed to every one, but many failed to return the cards, or to give the specific information asked for. The names of men that were rejected are not included because no reasonably complete list could be obtained up to the time of going to press. The committee would consider it a favor to have their attention called to any omission or mistakes, that an accurate record may be made.

NORTHAMPTON BRANCH

The Northampton Branch of the American Red Cross was organized at a public meeting in the High School Auditorium on Wednesday evening, June 27, 1917. The following Executive Committee was elected: President, Rev. I. M. Bachman; Secretary, T. J. Rupp; Treasurer, Charles H. Benner; First Ward, J. H. Danner; Second Ward, E. J. Royer; Third Ward, Rev. J. B. Stoudt. The meeting was addressed by E. J. Fox, president of the Easton Chapter, Dr. Paul Correll and Mrs. Davies, chairman of the Easton Chapter. Upon the completion of the first drive for membership, the several ward chairmen retired from the Executive Committee in order to give representation to the woman workers on the committee.

Mrs. E. C. Nagle was elected chairman of the Branch; Mrs. Chas. A. Haff, chairman of surgical dressings; Mrs. A. H. Laros, chairman of the Membership Committee; Mrs. E. J. Royer, chairman of knitting, and Miss Helen Reinhard, chairman of the Finance Committee. These ladies together with the above named officers constituted the Executive Committee.

The Board of Education of Northampton kindly gave the use of several rooms in the Central Building for headquarters. Many and varied loans and donations of equipment and of material were received from people of Northampton.

In the month of December, 1918, the Northampton Branch became affiliated with the Bethlehem chapter of the American Red Cross.

The following reports from the chairman, Mrs. E. C. Nagle, and the Treasurer, Mr. Chas. H. Benner, show the work, receipts and expenditures of the Northampton Branch.

The Lorraine Cross

When the German nation, trained to the last minute for forty years, in its mad lust for world domination, hurled its armies against France, the military experts loosed overwhelming force and seized the Argonne Forest. The commanding importance of those wooded heights and valleys made them the scene of a bloody struggle of four years' duration. Heroic France spent her best blood in vain efforts to drive the Germans from their menacing positions. Two points were regarded as the key to the long and seemingly impregnable line. They are Dead Man's Hill and Montfaucon. So important were these eminences that the French High Command offered a special decoration to the units that would take them from the Germans and hold them. This special decoration was the Lorraine cross, gray on blue field, the badge of the lost Province of Lorraine. But the men who would not let them pass at Verdun could not wrest from the enemy Dead Man's Hill or Montfaucon. France gave the flower of her dogged, gallant poilus for the prize she could not win.

Then came the Americans. One of its divisions, the Seventy-ninth, came from the coal mines, foundries, carpet factories, textile mills, cement mills, counting houses and farms of Pennsylvania and its neighbor states. These boys, untrained in the arts of war but imbued with the spirit of Democracy, took and held Dead Man's Hill and Montfaucon, and France gallantly bestowed upon them the Lorraine cross. The American High Command made it the insignia of the division, substituting it for the gold star and circle, which had been the division's insignia.

WAR SAVINGS STAMPS

The letter and rural carriers of the Northampton postoffice conducted the W. S. S. campaign. The total sales to September 1, 1919, are $55,463.03.

Stamps were sold in the schools by the teachers to the pupils. A rivalry soon developed between the several rooms in the same building and between the several buildings as units, with the following results, which amounts are included in the above figures:

|---------------------------|-----------|
| Franklin Building | $4729.34 |
| Washington Building | 3537.48 |
| Wolf Building | 2834.08 |
| Central Building | 1191.80 |
| High School | 851.38 |

Grand Total $13,134.06

WAR GARDENS

Many and varied have been the War Gardens in Northampton during the last three years. The various industries gave all available space to their employees for garden purpose in addition to which many vacant lots and back yards were cultivated. Northampton had one of the largest chains of War Gardens to be found anywhere, of which the various groups of the employees of the Atlas plant were the largest. It was a pretty scene to see, during the long evenings of the summer, scores upon scores of people working these stretches of gardens. It was these war gardens in America which produced the foodstuffs which maintained for the allied nations the balance between starvation and abundance. The value of the crops of the American War Gardens for 1918 has been estimated at $520,000,000.

The War Library Fund campaign was conducted by E. C. Nagle, Esq., and Edward J. Royer. The receipts were $411.16.

THE "LIBERTY-BETHNOR"

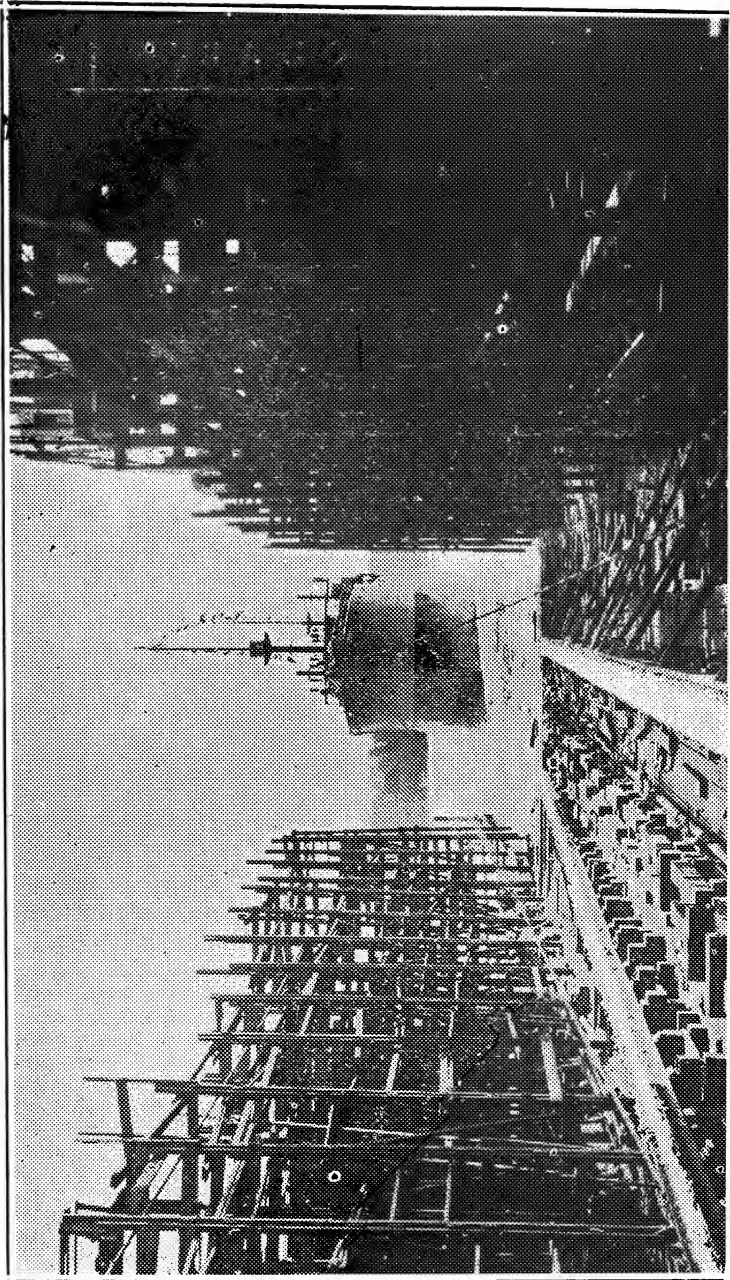

By virtue of its large oversubscription in the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, (which was the largest oversubscription of any district in the Third Federal Reserve District) the Bethlehem-Northampton District was asked to name one of the ships of the Emergency Fleet Corporation in process of construction. The name of "Liberty Bethnor" was selected. The name Bethnor was formed by taking the first four letters (Beth) of the name Bethlehem, and adding to it the first three letters of (Nor) of the name Northampton. The ship is a freighter of 5100 ton cargo vessel. She is 341 feet 5 inches long, with a 46 foot beam, and is 25 feet 6 inches deep. She was built by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation at its yards at Wilmington, Delaware, where she was launched on September 27th, 1919, at 3 p. m. The ship was christened by Mrs. Archibald Johnston, the wife of the Mayor of Bethlehem. She was assisted by Miss Margaret Miller, of Bethlehem, and Miss June Wickkiser, of Northampton.

The launching of the Bethnor was a brilliant social event. The day was perfect, and the Bethnor slipped off the ways as easily as the Bethlehem-Northampton district slipped over the top during the campaigns. The members of the launching party from the district were: Mayor and Mrs. Archibald Johnston, Miss Johnston, Miss Ethel Kingsley, A. P. Miller, Miss Miller, W. B. Myers, Miss Myers, R. S. Stein, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Foering, Miss H. E. Godshalk, F. P. Snyder, W. W. Peters, Ed. Warg, of Bethlehem; Miss June Wickkiser, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Reyer, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Miller, E. C. Nagle and A. P. Laubach, of Northampton.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

The veterans of the war have formed an organization similar in general character to the Grand Army of the Republic. The idea originated among the A. E. F. The first caucus was held in Paris, where plans for a general convention were adopted. The convention met in St. Louis, May 8th, 9th and 10th, and adopted a tentative constitution.

A local post was organized on September 30th, 1919, with the following officers: President, S. Clyde Frankeufield; Vice President, E. Albert Boyer; Secretary, George W. Fenstermaker; Treasurer, Harvey D. Deisher.
